

18 l 80 ASA International Design competition

The current global warming have impacts on ecosystem and increasing change to our climate, including snowfall in the places that have never seen snow, high temperature of 40 Celsius or below-grade temperature.

There are many natural disasters occurring more frequently and have a worldwide effect, such as earthquake, tsunami in Thailand and Indian, Typhoon in Philippines, and heavy snowfall in Japan and New York.

Due to these disasters, a large number of people have no place to stay and are forced to live in a shelter. Many of these shelters have poor facility management which has an impact on occupational health. As creative, architects, designers, we need to find a solution to solving the housing problems for these people. This year, the key message for Architect' 14 is architect's role in society. The Association of Siamese Architects (ASA) has been established since 1934, as a professional association, what has we done to society so far?

It is a good time for us to seek solutions that can demonstrate how architecture can help people in times of urgent need caused by natural disasters. Creative, architects and designers are invited to design a disaster shelter for use by a large number of people displaced by various natural disasters. The maximum volume of the shelter shell not exceed to $80m^3$. There is no requirement for a specific site.
